CLEAR THE DOORS

A HEALTH measure that should be enforced without delay or concession is the practice of jamming the doors of the brokerage offices during the hours when quotations are pouring in upon the wires. There is no necessity for obstructing the passage of those who wish to visit the places and a little emphatic suggestion from the health board would suffice to keep the opening clear and permit the free passage of those who are interested in the market or have business inside. The chief offenders are the women, who, with due deference to the amenities of life, should be reminded that they have no more right to block the way than the more rugged specimens of humanity. These women, apparently, assume they have the right to do as they wish regardless of the feelings of others or the value of time. Men usually dart in, glance at the board and fly out again in pursuit of their ordinary business, but the mulishness, as they called them in the old days of the "countdown," arrogate themselves the right to obstruct the transaction of business as though they were at a bargain sale of feminine foggery. The man who persists in forcing his way through the throng is usually greeted with a battery of indignant glances as though he were an interloper whose presumption in standing the barrage of breaths should be publicly reprimanded. Health authorities agree that influenza is a crowd disease which should be fought by restricting crowded conditions to the smallest possible limit consistent with the necessities of business. Appeal after appeal has been printed and spoken from press and platform for the public to avoid congested places and the health board has tried to avoid enacting any drastic regulations, but if the evil met at the threshold of the brokers' offices is not abated it will be found imperative to take action to scatter the fringe of femininity that menaces the health of the community.

RED CROSS APPEALS.

ONE more cry comes from France urging the American people to lend a helping hand. The call is not for money. The nation which bore the brunt of the war is sending out an appeal that should meet with the ready assent of every householder and every man, woman and child in the country. France begs for clothing—old clothing, anything to cover the nakedness of its people who lost everything they possessed in the cruel war where the poisonous fangs of the Hun were sunk deep into the industrial life of a happy, peaceful, contented and prosperous people. The Red Cross some time ago sent out an urgent call for its various branches to rally once more to the work of succoring a stricken nation. The response was not what it should have been. Where tons of old clothing, discarded shoes and boots were wanted only pounds were received. Once more the call comes from Red Cross headquarters imploring the American people to be considerate of the requirements of their fellows across the seas. The call is most urgent and no delay should ensue in complying with measure devised to allay an unspeakable distress. Tonopah chapter should get together once more and, out of the fullness of its prosperity, contribute its quota to the offering. This camp has done its bit in war work whenever called upon but the truth is that it has not done its best and the latest appeal should serve as a summons for the loyal ladies of Tonopah and Nye county to get together once more with a spontaneous answer to the petition from overseas. All the movement needs is a competent leader who will inspire the public with the sacredness of the cause. They represent and The Bonanza feels that the returns will be prompt and abundant. There is not a house in Tonopah that cannot send at least one pair of old shoes, a discarded gown, a few pieces of children's drapery to swell the pile of clothing that will speak more eloquently of sympathy than any amount of talk.

THE 14-POINT BLOCKADE.

AS THE days slip by at Paris it is becoming apparent that a final consummation of the peace treaty is prevented by the determination of the president to hold the treaty to a conformity with his famous Fourteen Points. He appears to take the position that he has made a contract with the German government on the basis of those points, and that he is in honor bound to see to it that the peace treaty does not go beyond the stipulations embodied in them.

But the fourteen points are vague, to put it mildly, and susceptible, like all the president's utterances, to varied interpretations. For instance, one of the stumbling blocks to an agreement among the conferees has been the French claim to the Saar valley and the neutralization of the territory to the west of the Rhine. There is no stipulation in the fourteen points that the pre-war boundaries of Germany shall be maintained, hence the allied representatives doubtless feel free to discuss that matter. But the eighth point reads: "All French territory shall be freed and the invaded portions restored, and the wrong done to France by Prussia in 1871 in the matter of Alsace-Lorraine, which has unsettled the peace of the world for nearly fifty years, should be righted in order that peace may once more be made secure in the interest of all." Probably the president insists that he means that France shall not encroach on German territory beyond the borders of Alsace and Lorraine.

Likewise, the only reference in the fourteen points to reparation for France is contained in the eighth point: "All French territory should be freed and the invaded portions restored." Can it be that Mr. Wilson takes the position that restoration of invaded France shall mark the limit of what Germany shall pay to that country? Yet reparation is one of the chief obstacles in the framing of the peace treaty, and we are told that the president insists that his fourteen points must govern. The American people, like the representatives of the allies, will reserve to themselves the right to interpret those points, and will insist that they shall not be used as a foil to rob the allied cause of the fruits of a victory won at such frightful cost.

While Chief of Police Jack Grant is about it he might as well make an example of some of the kid drivers who are endangering life by their recklessness in handling automobiles. There is a statute against trusting machines to children and this law should be enforced.

SPANISH BELT WEEKLY REPORT

The weekly report of the Spanish Belt Silver Mining company states that the San Pedro workings have been about cleaned and timbered down to the 145 foot level. Superintendent Hampton expects to start cleaning out the remainder of the shaft down to the 180 foot level as soon as possible. The company will soon install a heavier hoist and start sinking the shaft as soon as the equipment can be put in. Another new 3-machine semi-Diesel oil compressor will be in Tonopah during the week; also two new hoysers and a stoker, and the Spanish Belt will be in position to do mining on a fairly big scale. Mr. Hampton is also building a new road up the canyon to secure a better grade and road for use of trucks up to the mine.

AMUSEMENTS

THE GREAT NAZIMOVA AT THE BUTLER

Nazimova, whom the world's greatest critics have accorded the title of being the premier motion picture star, whom they say is alone in her class, has achieved another triumph in her latest screen production, "Out of the Fog," which will be the special attraction at the Butler today. The play is an adaptation from her great success "Ception Shoals," a play which created great comment both here and abroad and which was noted for the intensity of its dramatic situations. Nazimova was born in the Russian Crimea, in a little town on the shores of the Black Sea, and educated in Geneva, where she decided on the career of aviator and studied accordingly. She made her first appearance at the age of 12 at a concert in her native town but it was not long after this that she gave up music for the drama. She studied under the great Stanislawsky who considered her an artist of great ability even at an early age. As a leading woman in a Russian stock company she played over two hundred parts. Since coming to America she has played in both Russian and English, and like many other noted artists has grown to prefer the screen to the stage, where she has become famous both here and abroad. "Out of the Fog" is a story to wonder at—and a star to idolize. Do not miss it.

Pathe News will be shown on the program. Admission 10c, 25c. Tomorrow, George Walsh, in "On the Jump," Matt and Jeff, Ford Weekly, and Charles Ray in a Liberty Loan film.

"SILVER THREADS AMONG THE GOLD FLOAT O'ER THE RHINE"

New words to the air of "Silver Threads Among the Gold" have become very popular with the army of occupation, according to Will Garnsey, an Oakland boy who is with the military police battalion at Coblenz. The following words were enclosed in a letter to his mother, Mrs. Geo. C. White, 3017 Barker street, Oakland.
 Darling I am growing old.
 Silver threads among the gold.
 Now that peace in Europe nears I'll be home in seven years.

Yes, I'm coming home once more, Say in nineteen twenty-four, I'll drop in on you some night With my whiskers long and white.

Long fore this I thought I'd be Sailing home across the sea, Back to where you wait and pine But I'm stuck here on the Rhine.

You should hear our gang all curse, "War is hell but peace is worse." How I wish they'd send this line: "Job is finished on the Rhine."

When the next war comes around In the front ranks I'll be found, I'll rush in again pell-mell, Yes, I will, I will like hell.
